Petticoat Revolutionaries: Irish American Women and the Ladies' Land League

Janis will explore the activities of the thousands of Irish American women in the United States who joined the Ladies' Land League in the 1880s. Through their participation in the Ladies' Land League, Irish-American women carved out a new public role and voice within the previously male-dominated realm of Irish-American nationalism and public life.

Ely Janis is Associate Professor of History at the Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts (MCLA), where he teaches courses on nineteenth and twentieth century American history. The University of Wisconsin Press published his book, A Greater Ireland: The Land League and Transatlantic Nationalism in Gilded Age America, in 2015.
